Historical Note

The Association of Consulting Foresters of America, Inc. (ACF) was founded in 1948 to advance the professionalism, ethics, and interests of professional foresters whose primary work was consulting to the public. The ACF is the only national association for consulting foresters.

Forest History Society Library and Archives

In the spring of 1948, Alex Setser, a consulting forester from Tennessee, began polling all of the consulting foresters in the United States, concerned with networking and sharing of ideas within the profession. He realized that an organization was needed to represent these consultants and allow them to acquaint themselves with their colleagues, protect the field by establishing uniform standards, disseminate new practices, and provide foresters, as well as their clients, with a means of locating consulting foresters of proven reputation. In December 1948, an organizational meeting was held in Boston, and five foresters joined to create the Association of Consulting Foresters of America. These men who later became the association's founding members were Halsey Hicks, Robert Moore, Clinton Peltier, Ed Stuart, and J. Atwood Whitman.

The ACF was originally conceived as a division of the Society of American Foresters, but members opted to form a separate entity. The organization was founded on the principles of maintaining and enforcing ethical standards in forestry, increasing legislative activity, providing information, primarily through its Consultant monthly journal, and promoting the use of expertise in the management of forestry resources through continuing education offerings. The association later stated its purpose in its Constitution, Bylaws, and its Code of Ethics. The ACF requires that all of its members have a forestry degree from an approved college or university, at least five years of practical experience in forest management and administration, and at least one year's experience as a forestry consultant. As of October 2008, ACF maintains more than 675 members in 38 states and 1 Canadian province. The ACF is divided into twenty-two regional chapters and is headquartered just outside of Washington D.C.

Collection Overview

The collection consists of Association of Consulting Foresters records largely concerning the organization and its operations. The collection is divided into six series, including files on financial and tax documents; office policies and procedures; advertising and promotion; staff and members; individual ACF chapters, focusing largely on the Alabama chapter; and correspondence and interaction with organizations such as the Practicing Foresters Institute of Trust (PFIT), the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), and other independent organizations such as the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Society of American Foresters (SAF). Also included in these series are files on ACF committees, meetings, ethical and legislative concerns, and history of the ACF; a bound volume of Historical Perspective, the Early Years provides a brief history of the organization, its leaders, and its accomplishments.

This collection contains a large number of records and correspondence pertaining to influential people who shaped ACF history, including John Bradley Jr. (President of ACF 1974-1976; Chairman of Resource Management Services Inc., Chairman of Alabama Chapter ACF), Harry Murphy (ACF member, President of Resource Operations Inc., Executive Vice President of Resource Management Services Inc.), and L. Keville Larson (ACF President 1982-1984). The collection also contains reference to other significant people including Arthur Ennis, Colin Bagwell, Robert Fiske, Frank Bennett, John T. Clark, Harvey Striplin Jr., and William Banzhaf.

Collection Arrangement

The Association of Consulting Foresters records had a loose organizational structure when donated, however, some changes were made to the collection in order to make it more accessible. Various files were reorganized and renamed, misplaced items were correctly filed, and duplicate copies were discarded. The first installment of the original collection contained twelve boxes, and eleven boxes remained after reorganization. The second installment was received in seven boxes, which were physically merged with the first collection; after weeding out duplicates and some restructuring, the collection consists of a total of 16 boxes. Staples were replaced, clips were removed, newspaper clippings were photocopied, and the folders and boxes were replaced with acid-free ones. Documents within files are arranged in reverse chronological order.

The records are arranged into six series:
